Mary Anne, Part 2, Ch. With the end of GDR television, DEFA films lost their guaranteed screening times and had to compete for slots with other films on the new channels in the dual system of the Federal Republic. The dual system of public and private television, comprised of the public stations, ARD and ZDF, and a wide array of private stations, has existed since the liberalization of the state monopoly in 1975. The public stations are controlled and subsidized by a board of directors from political parties, unions, churches, and non-profit organizations. Every German that owns a radio or TV has to pay a monthly fee to support public broadcasting in Germany.
